

ALEX BRADY

graduated from Boston College in 2007 with a B.A. in English and a minor in History. He is a proud native of Buffalo, NY. Alex wrote this paper for Professor Christina Klein's seminar "Studies in American Culture: Globalization." He is currently a member of Teach for America and will be teaching 8th grade English and Social Studies in the South Bronx starting fall 2007.

KERRY BRENNAN

originally from St. Paul, MN, graduated from the College of Arts and Sciences Honors Program in 2007 with a B.A. in International Studies, concentrating in Economics, and a minor in Hispanic Studies. Her area of research interest is in International Economic Development. Kerry currently lives in Mexico City where she is working on a study of the price elasticity of demand among microfinance clients as a Project Associate for Innovations for Poverty Action.

JARRET IZZO

graduated with a B.A. in History in May 2007, as a member of Boston College's Order of the Cross and Crown, and receiving the Brendan Connolly and Arts Council awards. He plans to resume his academic pursuits after further exploration of his show-business career.

SOREN LAGAARD

Soren Lagaard is a senior in the College of Arts & Sciences majoring in History and Political Science. Hailing from the state of Minnesota, Soren found the inspiration for his essay in a class taken on the history of racism last fall. He is currently studying in Cairo, where he hopes to continue studying issues of race and identity. Many thanks go to his instructor, Professor Braude, for all his guidance.

CELSO JAVIER PEREZ

is a junior from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic majoring in Theology and Biochemistry. His research interests include sexual ethics, bioethics, and public health and ethics. This past summer he interned with the Prevention, Care, and Impact Mitigation Team of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) in Geneva, Switzerland.

SOPHIE THIBODEAU

graduated from Boston College in May 2007 with a B.A. in Political Science and concentrations in International Studies and French. She is currently working as a Research Associate for the Global Strategies for Change Project, studying the framing mechanisms of different campaigns for women's economic and political rights. Sophie hopes to pursue further degrees in anthropology. The article, "Federal Success in Nigeria" is an excerpt from her completed undergraduate thesis entitled "Federalism and Ethnic Conflict Management Strategies: A Federal World Order."

HUY TRINH

is a member of the Arts & Sciences Class of 2009, double majoring in Philosophy and History. He is originally from Saigon, Vietnam but currently resides in Malden, Massachusetts. He was a member of the Shaw Leadership Program and the Emerging Leadership Program during his freshman year. During the school year, he volunteers for the Admissions Office and works as a Student Ambassador for the Gates Millennium Scholarship Program. Huy plans to continue his research into the philosophical implications of Artificial Intelligence as a McNair Scholar.

ALEX YIANNOPOULOS

a native of New Orleans, graduated in May 2007 with a B.A. in Philosophy and Linguistics. He is currently researching Tibetan Buddhism on a Fulbright grant to Nepal, where he plans to complete a Master's degree in Buddhist Philosophy and Himalayan Languages.